Frequently Asked Questions:

What is ADA?

 ADA stands for Americans with Disabilities Act, a bill designed to ensure ease of website accessibility for disabled people. The full scope of its compliance regulations is set for publication in 2018.

What's the big deal?

 Even though ADA rules wan't be published until 2018, the Department of Justice has required hashesses to ensure website accessibility. More than 250 financial institutions were sued on grounds of website inaccessibility in 2016 alone.

How can a website be at risk?

 The truth is, most websites were not designed with reodern accessibility suftware or hardware in mind. Websites require hard-coded development to ensure that centent is compatible with, for example, contemporary test to opench applications.

Can you give some specific examples of technical threats?

- Text-voicel threats that could cause accessibility complications might include any of the following:
 - Section 508(A) Issues
- WCAG Editavel A, AA and AAA leques.
 - WCAG 2.0 Level A, AA and AAA issues

What can a credit union do?

 Set proactive, to safeguard your credit union the very real – and growing – number of lawquits related to website accessibility. Not only will an ADA-specific audit offer greater protection to your credit union, it will mean less work when all ADA regulations are published and enforced.
